T.Graham Brown, The Next Right Thing

(3 1/2 out of 4 stars) (★ ★ ★ 1/2)

Champions of Brown's '80's singles claim he was one of country's great blue-eyed soul singers. Listening to the rave-up of Still Not Out of the Woods and Brown's affecting version of the Jerry Lee Lewis hit Middle Age Crazy, it's easy to believe they're right. Brown's battles with the bottle and subsequent embrace of gospel themes allow him to plumb emotional depths he reached only occasionally during his heyday. From his cover of Steve Earle's My Old Friend the Blues to the almost unbearably tragic Which Way to Pray, this might be the closest any country singer has come to making a Bruce Springsteen album - Mansfield (USA Today)

The Industry Says...

“T. Graham Brown's performance always shows what great music is all about... passion”

Pete Fisher-
Vice Pres/Gen Mgr
Grand Ole Opry

“What a singer,
what a show!”

Robert Gallagher-
Billy Bob's
Ft. Worth, Texas

“T. is the consummate performer. We have worked together for over 7 years and he has been a crowd pleaser every time, whatever the audience. T. Graham delivers the right show!!”

Butch Spyridon-
President of Nashville
Convention and Visitors
Bureau

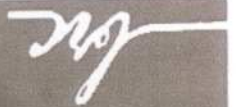

There is only one T. Graham Brown, "His T-Ness," and that uniqueness has made him one of the most enduringly popular singers in Nashville. He is a journeyman and songwriter whose blue-eyed soul sound defies musical boundaries. He has penned several hit country songs and has garnered 10 Top Ten hits, a CMA Award, and a long list of national radio and TV ads.
